Families United Against Hate provides support, guidance and assistance to individuals, families* and communities dealing with incidents based on bias; and to the people, organizations and agencies who serve and support them.

FUAH is a small grassroots nonprofit organization created in 2001 by and for families and survivors of hate motivated violence, in collaboration with other individuals and organizations.

FUAH defines hate incidents as violent acts or intimidation committed against a person, group or property that is motivated by an offender's bias. The victim or property has been intentionally selected because of real or perceived identifiable characteristics or circumstances, or because of an affiliation with people with those characteristics or circumstances.

Although not all are protected by laws, bias motivated incidents may include, but are not limited to, incidents based on: race, color, religion, ethnicity, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, disability, gender, socio-economic status, homelessness and more.

* We define family broadly to include biological, extended and chosen family.

What does Families United Against Hate Do?

FUAH provides emotional support for victims and their families; connects them to resources and helps them to understand and deal with the legal system, media, and requests from organizations. We also support, guide, assist and provide resources to people, organizations and agencies who work with victims, their families, and communities.

Some of the people FUAH has supported and worked with:

- the mother of a murdered gay son
- a lesbian couple who were being harassed and shot at by a neighbor relative
- an interracial couple who were being harassed and threatened
- four lesbian college students who were assaulted
- the mother, family, friends and community of a murdered two-spirited youth
